Carmel Pine Cone

Saturday, Nov. 8, 1924 CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, CALIFORNIA Vol. X, No. 40

Decisive Results of Battle of Ballots

The election is over. Beginning March 4 we shall have four years more of Calvin Coolidge. The outcome was most decisive, the American people in no uncertain way showing the kind of man and the kind of government it wanted.

Many of the so-called doubtful states, including California, are safely in the Republican column. La Follette went down fighting, and Davis also ran.

In the local contest for superior judge there is much satisfaction over the election of Judge Fred A. Treat.

The Water and Power Act was almost as badly rejected as at the election in 1922.

Long Hours

The election officers of Carmel No. 2 Precinct, at Arts and Crafts Hall, were the last of the three local precincts to complete their labors, they having the largest number of votes to tabulate. It was about 3:30 o'clock Wednesday morning when the papers were all signed, sealed and dispatched. Precinct No. 1 and Hatton Precinct finished at about midnight.

How Carmel Voted

| | Prec. 1 | Prec. 2 | Pt. Lobos | Ttl |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Coolidge | 121 | 163 | 101 | 385 |
| La Follette | 31 | 66 | 23 | 120 |
| Davis | 15 | 20 | 13 | 48 |

'Way Down East Play for Thanksgiving Week

"That," observed Dr. Burton, as he drove the last nail, "that is a real staircase." Real and experienced, for pretty Spanish feet of Juanita, the Rose of the Rancho, ran down it last month, and now, transferred from the Forest Theatre stage to Arts and Crafts, it is ready for John Hilliard's production of Hearn's "Shore Acres."

Another real thing in that Thanksgiving play will be the Thanksgiving dinner. Call it realism or subtlest subconscious appeal, just as you like, but the fact remains that the turkey carved in that famous second act will be a real turkey, and that the onion-smell that comes to the audience will not be due to any modern stage-device. Somehow, in the matter of roast turkey and pumpkin pie, it is hard to get ahead of nature.

Mr. Hilliard's cast is practically complete now, and rehearsals are well started for this truly American play, as cleanly of the soil as wintergreen berries, as staunchly built as an old three-master out of Salem, a play which has still a lot to teach our moderns, were they only able to see it.

Coming Events

Wednesday, Nov. 12—Monthly meeting of Carmel Humane Society, Pine Inn.

Nov. 21, 22—"The Master Buider," by Henrik Ibsen. Theatre of the Golden Bough.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Nov. 27, 28, 29—(Thanksgiving Play) Revival of James A. Herne's famous American play, "Shore Acres." Arts and Crafts Theatre.

Dec. 5, 6, 7—Premiere of "The Ship," by St. John Ervine. Theatre of the Golden Bough.

Writing of Carmel, Norman Johnson, who was here recently, says in the Pasadena Star-News: "Judging from the large number of Pasadenans who summer at Carmel, there are many who realize that one need not leave California when requiring a change of atmosphere, for there, by the sea, in the midst of the towering pines, one may luxuriate and enjoy the most perfect contentment."

The local postoffice has been without the services of William Titmas for several days this week. He has been wrestling with Old Man Influenza.

"You and I" a Triumph for Producer and Players

By John Northern Hilliard

Naturally, as one more or less concerned with the mechanics of drama, I was more interested in the producing and playing of "You and I" than in the play itself. That the play would be directed by Maurice Browne with his accustomed skill, adroitness and finesse, I accepted as a foregone conclusion, and in this respect I was not disappointed, although I believe that he would have done a more workmanlike job had he edited Mr. Barry's script with the freedom with which—for instance—he would have amended and emended an acting version of a Euripidean tragedy or a comedy by William Shakespeare. Knowing Maurice Browne as well as I do, I know that he would not scruple to warp the text of even the youngest Harvard graduate to his own needs. Why he did not do so in the case of Mr. Barry's play is of no particular concern of mine—at least so far as criticism is concerned—but I should like to—and probably will—have it out with him on this point over the walnuts and whatever we can get to take the place of the proverbial wine.

An agreeable, unpretending piece of work is "You and I," by Philip Barry, which Mr. Browne chose as the opening program of his fall and winter season at the Theatre of the Golden Bough. The story has been told a thousand and one times; the characters are more or less ready-made, but endowed with so many likable—and conventionally dramatically effective—qualities that they appeal generously to the sympathies of an audience.

It is not altogether a faultlessly tailored play. I found any number of minor faults in its construction, and many more grievous ones in the author's development of character. These faults a more experienced playwright would have instinctively deleted. The worst fault, from the point of view of the auditor, is its repetitiousness. There is a sameness to the play, from curtain rise to curtain fall, which, in the case of Mr. Browne's production was made endurable by the excellent playing and direction of Mr. Browne, the downright professional acting of Ruth Kuster in a comedy character part—one of the most delightful and convincing bits of comedic portraiture that I have seen in the waxing and waning of several blue moons—and the generally good support Mr. Browne received from his group of players. Had Mr. Browne edited the play more freely, the result, as I have said, would have been a more agreeable performance from the audience's point of view.

For one thing, with a few minor changes, a more definite curtain could have been achieved. As the play now stands, the curtain falls on an indefinite conclusion. Nothing has got much forwarder than when the curtain unfolded on the first act. I know that I for one went out of the theatre at midnight with the impression that Maitland White and Nancy his wife would go right back into their old grooves at the breakfast table the following morning; that the same discussion that started in the first act would keep the conversational ball a-rolling in the White household with unmeasurable weariness until one or the other of the twain were happily gathered to his or her fathers. This lack of a definite ending is due to faulty character drawing and in part to feeble dramaturgy.

But now that I have got this off my mind, let me also say that the play, as a whole, is so genial and humane that it charmed me—as I am sure it did the two audiences at the Theatre of the Golden Bough—by dint of sheer amiability and unpretentiousness, which are unusual qualities in so young and inexperienced a dramatist as Mr. Barry. His play conciliated my sympathies even though at the same time in certain situations it insulted what little intelligence I may possess. What is not preposterout in the Gaugainesque episode of a father of a grown-up family (after more than two decades of dabbling commercially in soap—an occupation almost as sapping to the soul as trafficking in real estate) suddenly blossoming forth into an artist and painting a picture that brings, while yet its pigments are wet, the amazing sum of four thousand dollars, is so flagrantly of the theatre brand of hokum that the only redeeming feature about it was the way which Mr. Browne, as an actor, put over the scene where his picture is bought by the soap magnate.

Here was fine craftmanship. Maurice Browne, in fact, got so much more value out of this situation than the author put in that for one fleeting, swallow-winged moment he ALMOST made the character plausible. Here was adeptness and careful technical execution that to my way of thinking stamp Maurice Browne as a comedian of rare ability. By his genuinely distinctive acting in what was to my way of thinking the shoddiest moment of the play, he almost made the incident convincing. That he did not wholly succeed is not one jot or tittle to his discredit. It is solely the fault of the playwright, who is either too young or inexperienced to adhere to the plausible and histrionically logical development of character.

This is my chief quarrel with Mr. Barry. He has made a lovable, Lockeian character of Maitland White, but not a wholly convincing one. Either he did not understand the man he was creating, or he did not realize the prime dramatic possibilities of the character. Yet blurred as is this stage portrait Mr. Barry has painted, nevertheless his fable, part threadbare, part extravagant, somehow kept me interested and amused. Possibly an unusual gift of jazzy and pungent humor, which concealed or at least excused the deficiencies in the plot, may have had a good deal to do toward keeping my interest alert through three acts of more or less repetitious dialogue and redundant incident. But no! that is not the whole explanation, either. I think it is the definable quality Maurice Browne possesses in a remarkable degree for effective "business," the instinct for little bits of illustrative and entertaining action, that kept me absorbed in the affairs of the White family and their friends through three unnecessarily long acts. But enough of the play's long-comings and short-comings. It may be briefly docketed as a first-rate light comedy of the second order—showing an easy mastery of bright dialogue, and a lack of discernment in character drawing. An ingeniously conceived, brightly told play, offering no very penetrating criticism of life, yet bearing sufficiently on the social phenomena of the day to give it a touch of satiric quality. And that is that.

Mr. Browne did for the production all that probably was humanly possible in the short time he had for rehearsal. The settings were effective—and here I again rise to doff my chapeau to the admirable Mr. Gaskin. The lighting was the most satisfactory I have yet experienced in the Theatre of the Golden Bough and less a strain on the eyes, for which I thank my friend, Dick Johnson. The costuming was for the most part admirable. I didn't like the costume Miss Duane wore in the third act, but that is merely a matter of individual taste, and I know that Rhoda Johnson will not hold this criticism against me. Mr. Browne's own performance was vivid, adept and genuinely humorous—and pathetic, as all genuinely humorous creations must needs be. He seemed to me to overdo the laughter of the part. There is nothing of which an audience sooner tires than laughter on the stage. We want to do it ourselves. In the matter of mere technique, in the virtuosity of execution, in the fine balancing of histrionic values, in the subtle use of pace and pause, in the difficult art of phrasing, Mr. Browne's performance was a post-graduate course in the art of acting. I for one hope that before he ends his winter season at the Golden Bough he will give a repeat performance of "You and I," solely for the beneficial effect it will have on our own Carmel

Humane Society to Care for Animals

Marshal Gus Englund is a contented and happy man these days. "Why?" you ask. Well, at the monthly meeting of the city trustees last Monday night he was relieved of the care of stray dogs, cats and sundry. For a period of six months it has been decided to allow the local humane society and a poundmaster to assume this necessary civic duty. This on the request of Mrs. C. Halsted Yates, Miss Eunice T. Gray and Miss Alice McChesney. The details of this arrangement are given in another column.

So many speed-burners are now using San Antonio avenue as a race course that Phil K. Gordon requested some relief. The board appointed Trustee J. B. Dennis to see that warning signs be put up at intersections, and Trustee Helen W. Parkes got an appropriation of $50 for the removal of trees on that thoroughfare, under the direction of the planning commission.

Mr. and Mrs. David Oliphant, who have a home down on the point, sent in a communication requesting that the sewerage outlet be established along the beach at the mouth of the Carmel river. This was taken under advisement.

A number of north Lincoln street residents who requested permission to construct at their own expense a gravel road between the canyon and Fifth street were turned down, it being the desire of the trustees to put down a better type of road on that street.

No casualties.

A Cheerful Loser States His Position

Carmel, Calif.,
Nov. 1, 1924.

Editor Pine Cone.

Sir: Regarding the protest against paying the deficit of the Serra Pilgrimage and the intimated miserpresentation by solicitors, permit me to make the following remarks on behalf of the committees in charge of the affair:

I do not know how the matter was represented to others, but I was told that it was probable that the underwriters would not be called upon to pay the whole amount and likely the receipts would be sufficient to cover expenses. These statements agree reasonably well with the outcome. It was evident to me that if I signed for a certain amount it might have to be paid, and if a person could not afford it, he was taking a chance if he signed. When it was suggested to me that $200 was the minimum which would be acceptable, I remarked that I would sign for $100 or not at all, and this I did.

I have confidence in the committee in charge of the finances and do not question the amount of the deficit. Although I haven't much money I intend to pay without any unpleasant contention.

L. S. SLEVIN.

Thanks, Old Pal

The editor of the Pine Cone had a birthday anniversary the other day. A Los Angeles friend wrote him as follows:

"We who live in the Golden West love our California missions, not alone for their artistic beauty, but because they are silent witnesses of the glory of achievement in the dawn of civilization on the Pacific coast and connecting links with the romantic history of those early days of a past century.

"However, on this anniversary of your birth I would not wish for you that you may live to be as old as the missions, for they are now crumbling ruins and their active usefulness is only a memory.

"But—my wish for you is that you may live to see every dream of your heart's desire come true and experience in the fullest measure the joy and satisfaction of this accomplishment."

The Morse family of Milton, Mass., who have come here every year about this time for a vacation, have changed their plans this year. They will winter in Florida.

Make Better Friends of Our Animal Friends

This department is edited by Eunice T. Gray, to whom all communications should be sent, in care of the Pine Cone.

MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Carmel Humane Society will be held Wednesday, November 12, 2:15, at Pine Inn. All who are interested in the humane work are invited to attend.

CITY TRUSTEES AID SOCIETY

The Carmel Humane Society is happy to announce that the city Board of Trustees acted favorably upon their petition presented to the board on Monday night in which the society asked for the support of the city to the extent of $30 a month in order to pay a caretaker for the Animal Shelter and an authorized collector of dog and cat licenses.

The caretaker and the shelter designated by the Humane Society are known in some communities as the pound master and the pound, terms which, through methods often used by them, have meant callousness and stupidity instead of humaneness and intelligence.

By the terms of the new ordinance which will be drafted and submitted for approval at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees dogs will be taxed $1 and $2 and cats $1, with 25 per cent penalty for delinquent taxes.

A deputy will be appointed by the city in co-operation with the Humane Society, whose work will be limited to the care of stray animals and the collection of dog and cat taxes.

This work would be a burden upon Marshal Englund, which he should not be asked to assume.

The action of the Carmel Board of Trustees will no doubt be an incentive and example to other communities who are trying to protect the public and at the same time to give the animals a square deal.

Carmel now has a really truly Humane Officer. Miss Louise Conger, who has been ever since her coming to Carmel (and long before) an ardent and untiring worker and supporter in humane work, was sworn in last week at San Jose, as a state deputy, with power to make arrests and report all violations of the state law in regard to treatment of animals.

BOY'S CODE OF HUMANE SERVICE

Wm. F. H. Wentzel
(Field Representative, American Humane Education Society)

1. I will seek to govern my life by a keen appreciation of the rights and feelings of others.
2. I will seek to keep alive within me that spark of human greatness called sympathy to the end that I may be considerate and merciful in all my acts.
3. I will give ear to the cry of pain or distress, and will give up my play, my game, and, if possible, my work, to come to the rescue and to render the service needed.
4. I will always remember the law of kindness: "Anything which gives pain to another should not be pleasure to me."
5. I will protect the weak and helpless and speak for those who cannot speak for themselves.
6. I will ever seek to change sadness to happiness and to bring joy into the lives of the unfortunate.
7. Though others may scoff, scorn, or abuse, I will be courageous in resisting all acts of abuse or cruelty to any living creature.
8. I will be a friend to those who need a friend and stay by the task until it is finished.
9. I will sacrifice pleasure or gain if thereby I can prevent unwarranted pain or suffering of any living creature.
10. I will listen to the voice of conscience and apply the Golden Rule in dealing with every living creature.
11. I will be helpful every day, and keep my life filled with deeds of kindness and acts of love.
12. I will place humane conduct above selfish desires, to the end that my life may add to the happiness and advancement of the community and of the age in which I live.

50,000 IN LIFE-SAVING SERVICE OF RED CROSS

Additional 50,000 Water Safety Experts Probable Gain of Summer Campaign.

A boy watched an expert give a class a lesson in the way to revive a person unconscious from water immersion. The next day the boy tried it on a bathing companion and saved his life. Such a boy justifies all the effort and the cost of the Life-Saving Service, American Red Cross officials declare. The Red Cross method of restoring partly drowned persons is so simple that the continual large sacrifice of life must decrease as an informed public insists upon general instruction in prone pressure practice to induce respiration.

The Red Cross Life-Saving Service in every part of the country, summer and winter, is engaged in teaching this method as an integral part of swimming and life-saving. This service has grown from a single expert in 1914 to a corps of almost 50,000 active life-savers. In this tenth year of the work it is predicted that fully 50,000 more experts will be eligible for membership in the corps. This large accession in a single year is confidently expected as the result of the campaign among 22,000 troops of Boy Scouts under a plan to qualify at least two life-guards in each troop.

During the past year 4,746 men, 3,374 women, 9,731 boys and girls successfully passed the rigid tests of the Red Cross—an increase of 5,331 over 1923. Intensive instruction is developing hundreds of qualified examiners for the Red Cross Life-Saving Corps, who supplement the teaching staff maintained by the national organization. The cause of water safety is therefore penetrating to new sections and eventually will cover all American territory.

Recognition of this Red Cross service for humanity is growing apace. At the request of the War Department every military training camp had life-saving instruction last summer. Municipalities have adopted the Red Cross course, public and private schools are offering it to students, business, civic and athletic organizations are promoting campaigns, and police departments are making it a part of the conditioning process for their recruits.

Volunteer life-savers throughout the country, the American Red Cross reports, are eagerly advancing the cause of water safety, 388 volunteers receiving medals for giving from 200 to 300 hours' service in two or three years. In addition 36 rescue bars to medals were awarded members of the Red Cross Corps who saved one or more lives during the year.

It is for the work and extension of life-saving that continued support through memberships is sought, and the American Red Cross urges all persons to join or renew membership during the enrollment campaign opening Armistice Day, November 11.

Splendid Concert Last Sunday Night

By Irene Campbell Cator

Of the delightful evening of music which some of us had the privilege of enjoying last Sunday evening at our Golden Bough Theater, the number which will probably linger longest in the hearts and minds of many is "Il Re Pastore," Mozart.

There are dramatic episodes in life, in music, in drama, some of which furnish a thrill, very temporary, while again we may meet an individual, witness an unexpected kindness to oneself or to others, see a landscape or listen to music, the serene peace and Godlike simplicity of which touches something very real and very deep in our inmost being, leaving a lasting and fragrant memory.

Such is "Il Re Pastore," and it would be hard to imagine a voice more lovely in lyric purity and sweetness of tone, and so, more ideal for this Mozart composition than that of Roberta Arment Leitch.

Of the other numbers which Mrs. Leitch sang, the "Song of the Open," by La Forge, stands out as being sung with dramatic power and abandon such as we hardly have the right to even expect from a coloratura soprano.

Annie Louise David's artistry and virtuosity as a harpist are too well known to need comment. "Fireflies," by Hasselman's, being perhaps her most effective number.

Edward Gerhard Kuster is certainly to be congratulated that, notwithstanding his many activities and responsibilities as director of his own delightfully restful and acoustically splendid theatre, he was able to play as satisfactorily as he did.

Mrs. Lawler has just received an interesting shipment of Medallion Chinese rugs; also a few larger ones. Come and see them at the Court of the Golden Bough. adv

Episcopal Clergy in Interesting Session

The gathering of the Episcopal Convocation of San Jose was held in this city Wednesday and Thursday. The opening service took place at All Saints' when Rev. C. P. Deems, rector of Trinity in San Francisco, preached a most uplifting sermon from the text, "I will not let Thee go except thou bless me." The solo, "Rest in the Lord," was beautifully rendered by Rev. George M. Dorwart.

Unfortunately, owing to mechanical delays, the unveiling of the tablet to the memory of the late Rev. Francis G. Williams had to be postponed.

The luncheon at the Bluebird was well attended by visitors and Carmelites. At 2:30 Bishop E. L. Parsons gave an address on "European Impressions—Religious and Political." The seating capacity was fully taxed.

After dinner a united service was held in Carmel Church. Rev. Noel Porter spoke on "Faith as a grain of mustard seed. The combined choirs of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel assisted. Mrs. A. B. Chinn played a violin number, with organ accompaniment by Mrs. Winifred Tupper, of St. James, Monterey.

Thursday's program opened with devotional exercises at 7:30 a.m. and an address by Dean Gee. A business meeting at 9:30 was followed by a picnic at Point Lobos.

Arts and Crafts Members' Night

Next Tuesday evening a delightful program of songs will be rendered at Arts and Crafts Hall by Miss Betty Sheppard and Miss Jadwiga Noskoviak, who are spending the winter in Carmel. Both are talented musicians. The latter will be remembered for her fine stage work in the recent Golden Bough production, "The Nursery Maid of Heaven."

The council of the Girl Scouts of Carmel are planning a bridge party to be held at the Fenton P. Foster home.

PINE NEEDLES

"Reg'lar Fellers" Gene Byrnes and wife are leaving New York shortly for home. They will be here about December 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Rask are home from Missouri and Texas, where they have been visiting relatives for several months.

Delos Curtis spent several days this week in San Jose, his old stamping ground. He has many friends in the Garden City.

Mrs. Ruth Kuster sails for Honolulu on the Maui next Wednesday. She will later be joined there by her husband. They will return to Carmel in the early spring.

The opening of the charming new home of Mrs. Caroline Hollis at Carmel Highlands was the motif a delightful dinner party to a number of friends Tuesday evening.

"Well, Bill, I'm mighty glad to be back," says Dr. Charles A. McCollom, who, with his wife, has been visiting in Palo Alto and the bay cities for several weeks.

Mrs. A. Thatcher, who was formerly Mrs. Florence Cherry, was in town several days this week. After a business trip to Arizona, she will settle in Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris have postponed their trip to New York for two weeks. Mr. Morris, whose mother died suddenly in Florence, Italy, received word that the body will not be shipped before November 13, causing a change in his plans to leave for the east immediately.

Thanksgiving is going to be gay at Del Monte. The Burlingame Club will hold a golf tournament at the Pebble Beach seaside links and there will be much activity with dinners and luncheon parties at the Del Monte Lodge. The new dining room and palm grill at Del Monte is going to be opened at that time and a golf competition will add to the attraction.

George E. Stone was called to San Francisco last week to plan for Shreve & Co. a motion picture showing the manufacture of jewelry. On Monday of this week he lectured before the Town and Gown Club on "Nature and Art in Education," illustrated by his natural color film; "A Day With John Burroughs" and lantern slides and stereographs and wildflowers.

Books, pamphlets, announcements printed by the Pine Cone Press.

Visit-School Day

The children, teachers and trustees of Sunset School invite parents, taxpayers and friends to visit school next week (except Tuesday, Armistice Day).

The enrollment has increased from a total last year of 137 to 175 the first two months this year.

Two years ago it was necessary to build an extra room, so that the six upper grades might be divided into three rooms, two grades to a room. This fall it is unexpectedly necessary to engage another teacher and to erect a temporary room so that the upper grades may have sufficient space.

Visit the school and observe how crowded it is, how necessary the new room is, and how vital it is that plans should be made at once for a larger and better equipped school house.

Pine Needles

John B. Jordan is to be congratulated in securing the services of Walter O'Connell as assistant manager of Pine Inn. O'Connell, who is a brother of Mrs. L. S. Slevin, is an hotel man of wide experience and accomplishment.

The largest vote ever cast in Carmel was deposited in the ballot-boxes last Tuesday. At that, all those who were eligible did not register, and some were out of town. Many local radio outfits tuned in to receive election returns.

The Russell Spanish type house, south of the Highlands, will soon be ready for occupancy. Contractor DeWitt Appleton has not only pleased his clients, but all those who have seen the structure are charmed by this attractive dwelling.

Last Friday evening a double event marked a social gathering at the Ralph Todd residence. The recent marriage of A. R. Kinsey and Miss Charis Boke was celebrated, and announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Marion Taylor and Ralph Todd was made.

His royal dukeletts, Arthur Cyril, no longer enjoys single-blessedness. He has taken unto himself a mate. Yep—he and Milton Valjean, son of the hero of Hugo's great story, "Les Miserables," have taken a cottage together. They take turns doing the chores.

The strenuous renting season being about over, Mrs. Daisy Bostick has given up her position with the Carmel Realty Co. Her plans for the future are uncertain. Just now she will rest awhile. Her last week-end guest was Miss Irene Alexander of San Jose.

William Tilden II and Billy Johnston, the two ranking players of the country, are going to Del Monte on November 15 with Dr. Summer Hardy, president of the California Lawn Tennis Association, and advise on the location and construction of two turf tennis courts.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Neil (Mrs. Neil was Miss Dorothy Pitts of San Francisco) spent the last days of their honeymoon at Stewart Lodge. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Smitz of Los Angeles and Mrs. Carlos Cooper Close were also recent guests of Miss Stewart. Mrs. Close is a Stanford girl and harpist in the Portland Symphony Orchestra.

JUST KIDDING

Proposal a la Mode

He finished powdering his nose and gazed listlessly out over Seal Rock where a lioness of the sea, with polished flapper, was cuffing its mate.

"I'm willing," he said at—length. "But, of course, you'll have to speak to father."

"Hell!" she said, flicking the ashes from her cigar. "I'll send for him tonight—damn!"

We, Too, Have Soldiered

All afternoon trucks piled high with grain and alfalfa had been rolling into the Presidio Gate, headed for the Quartermaster's Stores.

"Mother," asked a boy of five, "do the soldiers eat hay?"

"No, Junior," mother answer, "not unless you pour moonshine on it."

SHE HAD OFTEN BEEN A BRIDESMAID, BUT NEVER A BRIDE. HER HOPES RAN HIGH BEFORE THE BALL AT THE LODGE. BUT HE LEFT HER IMMEDIATELY AFTER THEIR FIRST DANCE. NO ONE HAD THE COURAGE TO TELL HER. EVEN HER MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS could not have known that he was officer-of-the-day, that he had slipped away without leave, that a mysterious phone summons had come to him in the nick of time——

Peninsula Nights

We were readin' an elegant romance
Of a slavin' craft, gore to the poop,
When lo and behold! we're diverted
To the glories of to-mato soup.

"Father and Son" next ensares us,
We read on with fast mountin' hope,
But Hopper's ball soon leaves the fairway
For the rough of palmivory soap.

Next we grab up old Benny Ames Williams
And live with him through flood and fires;
We spit on our thumb an' turn over
Smack dab into Neverfade Tires.

The moon rides serene o'er the cypress
The surf pounds away at the coast,
While we follow the dim trail of the fiction
Through the wilds of the Saturday Post.

SAVING THE HUMAN VOICE

Probably the greatest service rendered the American people by the universal introduction and use of the radio is the conservation of the human voice.

The decline of public oratory and the tendency to increase the nasal twang in ordinary conversation had almost deprived our country of the nobler uses of the speaking organs in public and private life.

The universal demand for clear-voiced speaking into the transmitter of the radio is restoring the carrying efficiency of the vocal organs.

The same influences are at work among singers, and clear, beautiful tones of the vocal organs are in the highest demand.

For enunciators to large crowds and for the cheapest radio in the poorest home there is universal appreciation of clear speaking and understandable vocal music.

This is a great gift to the American people.

NEWSPAPERS AND CRIME

Some recent statistics show that big metropolitan newspapers are devoting as high as 31.6 per cent of their news space to crime.

Important industrial and world news about progress and development is crowded out with sensational matter that tends to develop more crime.

In a southern Illinois town the other day the merchants met and asked the local paper to print less about crime and give more constructive news.

This criticism is not well founded if aimed at the country weeklies and small city dailies that reach about 60 per cent of the people.

To gain circulation and make a little more money by degradation of the reading matter that goes into the home is a crime in itself against the purity of the thought in the household circle.

Short Bits Relating to The Seven Arts

Corelli's Will Bars Actors from Her House

The late Miss Marie Corelli, of Stratford-on-Avon, England, left an estate valued at about $120,000 and bequeathed all of her property to Miss Bertha Vyver, her life-long companion.

Mason Court, Miss Corelli's Stratford residence, is to be preserved intact with its garden and paddock, and after Miss Vyver's death, it is to be preserved for the benefit and service of distinguished persons visiting Stratford-on-Avon from far countries. These visitors are to be selected and recommended to Miss Corelli's trustees by the council of the Society of Authors.

Miss Corelli, however, "absolutely excludes actors, actresses, and all persons connected with the stage," and "most strictly enjoins that no person connected with Stratford-on-Avon, officially or otherwise, shall be permitted to cooperate or be concerned in the carrying out of the trust."

"Secret Garden" Author Dead

Frances Hodgson Burnett, author and playwright, known particularly for her novel and play, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," died October 29 at her home, Plandome Park, Long Island, New York. She was 75 years old and had been in poor health for several months.

Until two years ago, when the last of her novels, "Head of the House of Coombe," was published, Mrs. Burnett-Townsend had written more than a score of novels, six plays and was editor of "The Children's Book." She wrote her first novel, "That Lass o' Lowrie's," in 1877. Among her best known works were: "Barty Crusoe and His Man Saturday," "Phyllis, the Showman's Daughter," "Esmeralda," "The First Gentleman of Europe" and "The Makings of a Marchioness."

She was born in Manchester, England, as Frances Elisa Hodgson. Her family moved to Knoxville, Tenn., in 1865. Two years later she began contributing to magazines. She was married to Dr. Swan M. Burnett in 1873 and divorced him in Washington, D. C., in 1898. Stephen Townsend, whom she married in 1900, collaborated with her in many plays. After Townsend's death in 1914, she chose to retain the name of her first husband as the one by which she was best known.

Tribute to Laura Jean

The late Laura Jean Libbey, after nearly fifty years of writing thrillers, had acquired almost a mythical fame.

Who and what she was, nobody seemed to know—not even those who sobbed over "The Beautiful Young Wretch" and "Misjudged." Some professed to believe that, as was said of Dumas, she was a syndicate.

It turns out she was a shy, enormously hard-working little old lady. To have put forth ninety novels and forty plays in one lifetime is a feat. Sir Walter Scott, Lope de Vega and "The Duchess" were no more prolific than Laura Jean Libbey.

Romance, raw and palpitating, full of high life—how Laura loved high life!—and lovers conquering fearful odds were her materials. Her theme was Shakespearean: "The course of true love never did run smooth."

It is now somewhat the fashion to laugh at the Libbey novels. But the laughter is misplaced. Precisely the plots and characters she wrote about, we witness to applause nightly at the movies. Stars gain fame enacting ravishing heroines, impossible villains and spotless young Galahads of the Libbey persuasion.

A million readers think of Laura Jean Libbey with gratitude for having whiled away their tedium before the screen usurped the monopoly of purveying popular and likable melodrama.—San Francisco Examiner.

Dickens Books Bring High Prices

The record price of $7,000 was recently paid at an auction for the first issue of the first edition of "Pickwick," in the original numbers and wrappers, brought out in 1836-'37. There was keen competition from American collectors, but the copy was secured by a Londoner.

After keen bidding against American buyers, another Englishman secured a first edition of Gray's Elegy printed in 1751, for $7,750. The copy contains six pages and was considered by the original collector to be incomparable.

"You and I"

actors. To study Maurice Browne's technique on the stage is as good—or better than taking a course in a dramatic conservatory. In case Mr. Browne does accede to my rather impertinent request to give another performance of "You and I," I should like to see Mrs. Browne in the part of the orchidaceous wife. This is said with all due respect to Miss Marjorie Morris, who played the exceedingly difficult role of the wife in last week's production; but Miss Morris is a beginning actress, and I am sure that she will agree with me that the part requires an actress of expertness and experience to completely embody the character she assumed.

Ruth Kuster made a character out of Etta, the maid, by dint of what was to me as skillful a piece of acting as has been done on a Carmel stage. So far as I am a judge, she completely submerged her personality in the part. At any rate, I forgot utterly that she was Ruth Kuster, that I know her, that I encounter her every day in Ocean avenue. I was under a complete illusion, and reveled in the delicious comedy she put across the (figurative) footlights. Mrs. Kuster has that rarest of all gifts in a woman—the gift of comedy. George Miller Ball did the best piece of acting I have yet seen him do in the Theatre of the Golden Bough. It is difficult for me to conceive of the part of Roderick White's being more expertly done. Carlisle Tupper's Veronica Duane was a correct assumption of the flapper type of the younger generation. It was an excellent portrayal. Smaller roles were acceptably done by Charles MacAllister and Edward Kuster.

Altogether, an auspicious opening of Mr. Browne's fall and winter in the Theatre of the Golden Bough. With so excellent an achievement behind him, I for one am looking forward keenly to his production this month of Ibsen's rarely staged "Master Builder," and his production of St. John Irvine's "The Ship," which is scheduled for the early part of December. Not the least of my interest in "The Master Builder" is due to the fact that Mr. Browne himself will play the part of Solness. The production of "The Ship" will be the first on any stage of this new play by the author of "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg." After "The Ship" is off the ways I hope Mr. and Mrs. Browne will see their way clear to do "You and I" once more. That would wind up Mr. Browne's season at the Golden Bough with what Miss Veronica Duane would refer to as a Wow finish. As Mr. Browne's contract with Mr. Kuster expires shortly after the first of the year, these will be the last of the Maurice Browne productions at the Theatre of the Golden Bough, at least for some time. In January he is obligated to go on tour with his group of players, and this work will keep him engaged for the next season. This is unfortunate so far as the drama in Carmel is concerned. Mr. Browne is a fine artist of the theatre and in the short time he has been here he has had a salutary artistic influence in the drama of the little theatre.

The Pine Cone Press is a modern printing plant, keeping pace with every improvement in the craft.

Red Cross Roll Call

Fifteen people have graciously consented to make the house-to-house canvas in Carmel for subscriptions in the annual Red Cross roll call, which is collected from Armistice day to Thanksgiving.

Certainly everyone in Carmel counts it a privilege to have at least a one-dollar share in the millions of dollars which the Red Cross spends each year.

Since the Armistice in 1918 the organization has expended $50,000,000 for services to men of the army and navy and world-war veterans. It is now assisting more than ten thousand disabled veterans and their families each month.

To 18,000 soldiers, sailors and marines on active duty it is giving the same help as during the war.

These are only a few of the things the Red Cross does.

Have your dollar ready when the collector calls.

Mrs. Albert Wilkinson and Mrs. Frederick M. Wallis are occuying the Brewer cottage for the winter. The former is from from Steilacoom, the oldest town in Washington. Mrs. Wallis is from Tacoma.

Harvey A. Russell, after voting Tuesday morning, departed for El Adobe Ranch, near Madera. He will be occupied at his ranch for some time, making occasional short visits here.

The Pine Cone, several weeks ago, stated that the Somervilles contemplated a trip to New Zealand. They left last week, taking with them their trusty, "Liz." They will be away about six months.

Mrs. G. A. Emery, who has been visiting her son and daughter-in-law in Carmel Woods, left Carmel this week for San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Allen Emery have gone to Palo Alto for the winter months.

Old-timer Devendorf is again greeting his friends on Ocean avenue. He got into town just in time to vote for Andy Gump. He was not in London long enough to acquire an English accent. My word!

Miss Margaret Stewart of Stewart Lodge, on the Point, has recently been hostess to several very interesting guests. Mr. Bert Benbow and the Misses Benbow spent the week end. Mr. Benbow is developing a large summer resort along the Eel river on the Redwood highway. Miss E. Benbow is a well known illustrator for magazine covers.
